Sammy's review of the LifeDrive

I first got the Life Drive to play with, 3 weeks ago when PalmOne invited me down to London to spend some time with them and I was invited to express my thoughts on their new Life Drive and to tell them what I thought about it. To say that I was excited about this new product is an understatement because it really is a great creation. I have been lucky enough to play and test the Life Drive for some time and I have to say that before I start looking at my review I would consider this a true replacement for my Tungsten C and as avid readers of Palm Addict will know this is something this device has to be good, it has to be on par with my standards for it to even be considered as a possible replacement for my Tungsten C.

So lets talk about the device itself when I first saw the Life Drive a couple of weeks ago I thought to myself wow it's much smaller than what I originally anticipated and it really is but the thing that made it stand out was first of all the size, it was much lighter than what I anticipated and the overall quality of the device it has a nice polished finished casing which really does give it a good standard. The buttons are great it has four icon buttons on the face of the device, obviously you can predefine what the buttons are for and it has a fantastic five way navigation button in the centre of the button console. At the top of the device it simply says Life Drive at the bottom of the device it says PalmOne and these are engraved onto the front casing. The screen is absolutely fantastic it's the most clearest Palm device that I have used and when you compare the size of the screen of the Tungsten C compare it to the Life Drive then you really are truly amazed at the quality. The hard drive is fantastic it's a 4GB hard drive but obviously you don't actually get to use the 4GB in fact in fact it is something like 3.85GB and this is the storage capacity that is available to you the user. But for a second lets think of what we can do with the hard drive I for example can put lots of I-tunes its not going to fully replace my iPod but it is going to come pretty damn close when I cant be bothered to take my iPod with me, take my Tungsten C with me then all I had to do was take the Life Drive with me and this is fantastic and the great thing is that it is Pocket Tunes and this is brilliant because I absolutely love Pocket Tunes but at the same time I can listen to internet streaming radio using a better quality audio speaker system than that of my Tungsten C and even better I can just put in my headphones into the Life Drive and then I am able to listen to my favourite tunes and believe me there is so much storage space is
